V-Enable's FreeMobile411 voice-enabled service now available to Sprint customers

By Dennis Bouchand · Posted on April 22, 2008

V-Enable, a local mobile search and directory assistance services announced the release of a full-featured downloadable version of FreeMobile411 to Sprint customers.

This easy to use and fast voice-enabled application allows users to simply speak what they are looking for by holding the talk key of their phone, and seeing the results displayed on the screen within seconds. Unlike most other directory assistance solutions, FreeMobile411 not only gives access to 140 million residential and 14 million business, listings but it also allows users to browse by category, get maps, driving directions, see other businesses nearby and more, all for free. On top of all that, the user is also provided with the option to connect to an operator, if still needed, at any time during the process.

FreeMobile411 functions identically to V-Enable's flagship product Mobile411 which is available on deck with select carriers, such as Alltel and MetroPCS. Now, with the release of the off deck JAVA version, Sprint users can enjoy all the benefits of a complete mobile search experience.

Sprint users can go online at FreeMobile411.com and register for the service, at which time they will be sent via SMS a link to download the application. Non-Sprint customers can visit the site and register with FreeMobile411. These users will be notified when FreeMobile411 is available for their handset and carrier.
