Mobile payment company Billing Revolution announced that it now has a status as a Mobile Commerce Partner with PayPal, enabling PayPal merchants to conduct mobile credit card transactions using their existing PayPal Payflow Pro gateway accounts.

There are roughly 45,000 merchants that process transactions via PayPal Payflow gateway, and all of them now have the ability to sell their stuff to consumers on a mobile phone — although it's unclear just how many of them will sign-up for the service.

And that's about all we got to share regarding this news. Plus there's the quote from Andy Kleitsch, CEO of Billing Revolution, who said: "Enabling mobile transactions for all PayPal merchants represents a strategic step forward for Billing Revolution. PayPal merchants wishing to conduct mobile credit card transactions can now safely and easily use Billing Revolution to process transactions through their existing PayPal accounts."

Now we only have to see whether merchants will show interest and actually start implementing the new mobile payment feature. We certainly hope they'll jump on board...
