iPhone/iPod apps for Dec. 10

Posted by Dennis Sellers • Dec 10, 2009 at 6:09pm

Here are the latest iPhone/iPod touch/iPod apps announced. You can find 'em at the Apple App Store.

.Ludia and Classic Media has launched Where's Waldo? The Fantastic Journey for the iPhone and iPod touch. Based on the hit publishing series, the US$4.99 app enables fans of the elusive Waldo to enjoy a hidden-object game experience on their Apple device.

In the weeks since the House passed H.R. 3962, the Affordable Health Care for America Act, claims, figures, and statistics have been passed off as facts or lies depending on who you ask, as people struggle to educate themselves on the U.S. health care industry. Now, iPhone users can gauge their knowledge of health care reform with the launch of Death Panel, a free iPhone and iPod touch game from People Operating Technology. The game is purportedly non-political, non-partisan and incorporates third-party facts into game play via a quiz-like interface.

AppAppers has launched iJog 1.0 for iPhone users. The $0.99 tracker app sports GPS technology that records time and distance, even if users are listening to music while they run or jog. iJog takes care of all trip calculations, even the course traveled, average speed, trip time and the number of calories burned.

WorshipApps has rolled out SongSuggest 1.0, a $5.99 praise worship application for iPhone and iPod touch users. It helps worship leaders select familiar songs for their music sets/services. SongSuggest features over 600 songs from around the world, and offers one-click search for online lyrics, chords, videos, and audio sorted by theme, key and/or tempo.

Dramatic Applications has launched Fight Lights 1.0 for the iPhone and iPod touch. The $1.99 app offers a way for avid sports fans to show support for their favorite team. Enter your favorite teams' names, select their uniform colors from a color picker provided, then flash your team's colors with special effects.

Appnoose has introduced Gorilla Monkey Crunch Lite 1.0 for the iPhone and iPod touch. The free, lite version features all the same functions as the fully paid version except that it doesn't have the global high scores using Openfeint, doesn't save the game on exit or interruption and is ad supported. Gorilla Monkey Crunch Lite is a 2D arcade style action game in which your goal is to knock out as many monkeys as you can from their rafts as they pass below by dropping coconuts from above.

Tarver Games has released Ghosts Attach for the iPhone and iPod touch. In the $4.99 game a story unfolds regarding the late 1960's disappearance of 13 scientists who were accidentally
