Mark Jung Joins FunMobility Board of Directors

Former IGN CEO and Fox Interactive Chief Operating Officer Brings Web Experience to FunMobility's History of Mobile Success

PLEASANTON, CA--(Marketwire - June 7, 2007) - FunMobility announced today that internet entrepreneur Mark Jung has joined their Board of Directors.

Mark Jung brings deep experience to FunMobility from his last 17 years as a successful internet CEO and entrepreneur. Prior to joining FunMobility's Board, Mark was the Chief Operating Officer of Fox Interactive Media (FIM) where he was responsible for all of its internet properties including MySpace, IGN Entertainment, FoxSports.com, Scout Media, and AmericanIdol.com. Prior to Fox Interactive Media, Mark was the co-founder and CEO of IGN Entertainment, a leading internet media and services company for videogaming and other forms of digital entertainment that he took public in March 2000 and then private in August 2003. Mark led IGN's sale to NewsCorp., the parent company of Fox Interactive Media in October 2005.
